

practica in process engineering ii extraction - ethz - practica in process engineering ii extraction introduction extraction is a process in which one or more components are separated selectively from a liquid or solid mixture, the feed (phase 1), by means of a liquid immiscible solvent (phase 2). the transfer of the components from the feed to the solvent is controlled by the solubility behavior of each component in the corresponding phase. two ...

chapter 1 introduction to separation process engineering - several other separation methods that can also be considered equilibrium stage processes will be briefly discussed. chapters 16 and 17 explore two important separations - membrane separators and adsorption processes - that do not operate as equilibrium stage systems. the equilibrium stage concept is applicable when the process can be constructed as a series of discrete stages in which the ...
